

To follow in the footsteps of my parents, I have always known that I wanted to be a teacher. To me, being a teacher is not only to choose a career, but it is a quality that is imprinted in my heart.

I have taught students of different ages in different settings. I started my teaching career in teaching music and Chinese in Taiwan after graduating from college. After coming to the United States, I kept teaching Chinese at heritage schools for many years.

I earned my bachelor degrees majoring in Anthropology and Computer Science with the minor in Music and Mathematics. I am certified in Mandarin Chinese and intermediate Mathematics in the State of Oklahoma. I am currently a mandarin Chinese teacher at Putnam City High School in Warr Acre, Oklahoma.

Knowing that I don't have solid foundation in pedagogy, I attended professional development programs every summer since 2008.

I enjoy teaching and I would like to pursue higher education in either instructional technology or language pathology.
