

My name is Hui Mao, my parents named me Hui as my first name, because they wanted me to be a wise person. As I mentioned my name Hui in Chinese means wisdom. It seems my whole life would be pursuing wisdom. I believe education is the first step of getting wisdom, that's the reason I chose Education as my major.

I was born in Mainland China, Nanchang the capital city of Jiangxi Province. I have a Bachelor's degree in Education from Jiangxi Normal University.

My first teaching job was started when I was a first year college student. Summer in 2005, I past the interview and got the teaching job in Ray's Foreign Language School. That was long time ago, but I still remember I learned a lot of practical teaching skills that school text books didn't mention. It made me more interested in learning and practicing teaching skills. After I moved to US in 2010, I continued my teaching career, working in International School of Louisiana as a middle school Chinese teacher. I love my students, they surprise me a lot, especially when they speak Chinese with me, asking me questions about China. That can make my day.

As a bi-lingual person or a foreign language speaker, I know how my students feel while they are learning or using a foreign language, which made me closer to my students. And also motivate me to be a better teacher.
