

Yunmei Reeder

I might not be in the Chinese teaching field very long (2 years) but I have passion and compassion with a heart to teach this beautiful language to not just my own children and friends but also the American students in k-16 levels.

I came from Taiwan and was so interested in English that I taught English first in Taiwan after graduated from college. I then mastered an English teaching degree after my education adventures progressed and over the Pacific Ocean to the America soil.

I've substituted at some heritage schools in the past and that's how I started to become serious in pursuing Chinese teaching. I found tremendous joy when I hear my students speak Mandarin in front of me or the smile on their faces when serving staff at the Chinese restaurant understood what they said when they ordered food.

I am in the process of completing my Master in Adult Education focusing on Chinese Teaching next year. I have been working at the University of Wisconsin-Platteville since 2008 and I teach K-12 Chinese language and adults alike on and off campus. Even with a busy working schedule I still maintain a constant teaching schedule and attend Chinese teaching classes to keep up the newest instruction strategies. I can't wait to apply the theories and tactics I learn from Dr. Tseng and all the excellent teachers in my class this fall.
